Developmental Perspective Action Research

Think of educators you are currently working with (or have worked with in the past).

- Which stage do you think is predominant for them?
- What information are you basing your assessment upon? (give examples)
- Try to identify people in at least three different stages.
- What information do you think would be most useful to share with them and how?
- Identify some coaching questions that you think might be useful to try with them.
- As you think about your interactions with them, now looking through the developmental mindsets paradigm, how has your thinking been impacted?

Learning Tool Exploration

Explore a few different items as potential learning tools for yourself.

- Notice what happens in your mind and body as you use each tool.
- Determine which would be good learning tools for you and which would not and explain why.

You can do this in pictures, note format, video, audio or writing and it can be informal. This is about your own exploration and reflection.
